

AMIA

The Association of Moving Image Archivists (AMIA) invites you to become a part of the community of archivists, scholars and concerned supporters of moving image preservation.

What Is AMIA?

Founded in 1991, the Association of Moving Image Archivists is the largest non-profit, professional association of moving image archivists in the world. AMIA's members range from those who work solely with moving images to organizations where moving images are only a small part of their collection to individuals who want to protect their personal home movie or video collections.

AMIA Mission Statement

The Association of Moving Image Archivists is a dynamic professional association dedicated to advancing the preservation, collection, and use of moving images through public and professional education.

Join AMIA Today!

The Association of Moving Image Archivists (AMIA) invites you to become a part of the community of archivists, scholars and concerned supporters of moving image preservation.

Members will receive the AMIA Newsletter; the AMIA Journal The Moving Image; invitations to all AMIA meetings and events; discounted registration fees for AMIA annual conferences (two per institutional membership); and, the benefit of being affiliated with the largest professional association of moving image archivists in the world. Individual Members are entitled to vote, hold elective office or appointive position, and participate in all AMIA Committees and activities.
